

EUTOPIA Undergraduate Summer School on the History of Violence

Dresden, 2-8 July 2023

The EUTOPIA Summer School explores violence as a broad theme across time and space, and queries what the manifestation of violence in different contexts can tell us as historians.

Born out of the longstanding relationship between Warwick and Dresden, the summer school is run by scholars from both institutions, providing you access to world-class research and teaching.

You will gain diachronic and interdisciplinary insight into histories of violence through academic seminars and lectures, field trips, archival visits, and more.

The summer school is for students at EUTOPIA partner institutions, and primarily aimed at those about to enter the final year of their undergraduate studies.

The inaugural 2023 Summer School takes place in Dresden, and will enable exploration of themes such as:

- Historiography of Violence
- Gendered Violence
- Colonial Violence
- Violence in Political Discourse
- Representing Violence
- Drink-Related Violence

Accommodation will be provided onsite at TU Dresden. Students will be expected to pay for their own meals, with reasonably priced options nearby.

Travel bursaries are available.
